

Autumn Internationals: Lawrence Returns to England Squad

Ollie Lawrence has rejoined the England setup for the Autumn Internationals after half a year sidelined with an Achilles tendon problem. The Bath midfielder's dream of being part of the British and Irish Lions expedition to Australia this summer was shattered by the damage he sustained during the Six Nations success against Italy in March.

After witnessing his club advance to the Premiership championship without him, the 25-year-old has healed quicker than initially anticipated and is available for the opening of the fresh season. He has been chosen in a 36-man party for a three-day training gathering to prepare for the Autumn Internationals 2025 encounters.

Lawrence, who accelerated his rehabilitation including hours inside an oxygen-enriched hyperbaric chamber, returned from the bench in Bath's 28-28 draw against Munster in a pre-season exhibition last Friday. Former skipper Owen Farrell, back at Saracens after his Racing 92 spell and therefore eligible again, has been left excluded.

Northampton teammates Fraser Dingwall and George Firkbank have also shaken off injuries to participate in the assembly beginning Sunday. Captain Maro Itoje will miss sessions as he undergoes a structured comeback from a concussion sustained in the concluding Lions Test on 2 August.

Autumn Internationals 2025: Important omissions and inclusions ahead of autumn campaign

Immanuel Feyi-Waboso, who missed most of the latter half of last season with an obstinate fear, together with prop Will Stuart, has had minor setbacks, ruling them out temporarily. Midfielder Henry Slade, absent from the summer series due to a hand injury, also returns. However, there is no place for Harlequins number eight Alex Dombrandt, Bath center Max Ojomoh, or Bristol scrum-half Harry Randall.

Supporters eagerly awaiting the Autumn Internationals 2025 will be watching selections closely as the squad prepares for marquee fixtures. Hooker Theo Dan, who lost his core contract during the summer, is overlooked in favor of Leicester's Jamie Blamire, while Luke Cowan-Dickie and Jamie George are both included.

Youngsters Seb Atkinson and Guy Pepper, who impressed on debut during the midyear triumph over Argentina, are retained alongside experienced Lions such as Ellis Genge, Tommy Freeman, Alex Mitchell, Fin Smith, Marcus Smith, and Henry Pollock. Lock George Martin, sidelined since February with knee and shoulder problems, remains unavailable.

England's Autumn Internationals 2025 campaign starts against Australia on 1 November, followed by contests with Fiji, New Zealand, and Argentina. The chosen squad convenes on Sunday, September 14, with preparation taking place at England's Performance Centre in Penny Hill Park and at Allianz Stadium, Twickenham.

England Vs Australia: Ollie Lawrence Makes Early England Return After Achilles Injury

The headline development is the return of Bath star Ollie Lawrence following six months' absence from an Achilles setback. The 25-year-old suffered the blow while representing England in their 47-24 victory against Italy in the Six Nations earlier this calendar year, a boost for fans eyeing England vs Australia Tickets.

At the time, Lawrence was in brilliant form, but the injury ruled him out of the Lions' tour of Australia. Initially forecast to be unavailable until December, Bath director of rugby Johann van Graan disclosed in June that the player was progressing ahead of timetable, encouraging news for fans eager for his comeback and those seeking Autumn Internationals 2025 tickets early.

Van Graan confirmed Lawrence is in good condition and likely returning sooner than predicted. I won't make bold forecasts because this is such a serious injury, Van Graan remarked. We'll proceed carefully, but what I can say is he's in excellent physical shape; you can see his devotion in the gym. Ollie is an ideal expert, and he has approached rehabilitation with total focus, doing everything within his power.

If there were a strict plan, I'd say he's ahead of it. We're excited with his growth, and the England setup is equally delighted he's among their finest players, and communication has been strong. Lawrence marked his on-field return in Bath's 28-28 draw with Munster during a pre-season friendly last Friday.
